China-Funded Naval Base In Cambodia

- China's next overseas military base could be in Cambodia, in India's extended neighbourhood, throwing a challenge to New Delhi's strategic outreach to Southeast Asia.
- The base, which has been in the making for a few years, has been under scrutiny.
- UK-based leading think-tank Chatham House in a report published last week referred to satellite images and claimed, "dramatic transformation of the Cambodian naval base, near Sihanoukville on the Gulf of Thailand".
- The development of the Ream Naval Base touches upon the number one priority outlined in the Cambodian government's 2022 National Defense Policy: border defense. In the wake of the 2008-2011 Preah Vihear conflict with Thailand, the Royal Cambodian Armed Forces have been engaged in wide-ranging military reforms for the purpose of protecting Cambodia's sovereignty and territorial integrity. Immediately after armed clashes with Thailand in 2008, the Cambodian government announced the doubling of its military budget.
